Incursion in my House

Possible Standing Wave Intrusion from Tech
Google Sync

This black sequined cushion was sitting on a chair which I walk past to close window curtains. It has two sides to each sequin, silver on the other side. On the first pass I noticed it was all black which seemed odd to me because I'd left it with a casual wave of my hand type pattern, just a swirl or something. I dismissed it because I thought I may have picked it up and the pattern was softened out, so I walked away. When I returned a couple of hours later, I noticed the letter P on the front of it and what appeared to be a map of Australia but on closer inspection it appears to be the Black Sea. The sequins had been pushed downward.

I shared this on Twitter as soon as it happend with a photograph. No one has responded.

More images overleaf. Taken since- in October, and November. I left the cushion on the same chair, haven't touched it since, the pattern continues to change slightly.
